No! not the dog that watched my household hearth, Escaped that night of blood, upon our plains! All perished! I alone am left on earth, To whom nor relative nor blood remains. No! not a kindred drop that runs in human veins! - Gertrude of Wyoming. Among the notable Indian chiefs who figure prominently in Canadian history, a high position must be given Joseph Brant, or, as he is known by his Indian appellation, Thayendagea. His period of activity was at the latter end of the 18th century, being a sort of Black Douglas during the American revolutionary war, and while he never figured in any battles of consequence, his many predatory campaigns among the outlying settlements of the revolutionists harassed the enemy...
