The aim in this book has been to present such subjects as the author wishes his own little son to know. Plan. This is a First Book, telling the story of the earth as The Home Of Man. The pictures show how fully the book deals with People. Grade. Pupils ready for a simple third reader can begin the study of this book. The text is graded with care, and leads upward by easy steps. Scope. This work covers two years of study. One year may be given to pages 1 to 68. Teachers may enrich the course by oral lessons on nature studies. Pictures. This is the most richly illustrated schoolbook ever sent out to young pupils. The pictures are the highest type of costly wood engraving. Nearly all subjects are photographs, with child life as the central thought. To pupils of this age, good pictures and maps often teach more than text. Maps. This book lays much stress on the study of location of important places. With this...
